STRIKE IN THE BRONZE STATUE OF LIBERTY IS BEING WASHED FIRST TIME

Perilous Work on Dome of National Capitol,

HOW IT WAS GOTTEN AT

Scaffolding of Light Weight, but Secure Built to Hold the Workmen who are Engaged in the Dell-

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27,-The bronze statue of Liberty, which crowns washington, D. C., June 2...—Into bronze statue of Liberty, which crowns the dome of the National Capitol, is now being washed for the first time in a period of nearly forty years. This task has proved exceedingly hazardous. Working at a height of 287 feet from the ground, with but very little space in which to move about, the feat requires men of nerve and coolness. Mr. Mac-Nichol, of Washington, who has the contract for cleaning and painting the Capitol, has a force of thirty men working on the building, and when it became known that the statue was to be cleaned, every one of them volunteered to undertake the task, and did not consider that they were taking their lives into their own hands to work at such a height. Mr. Albert Ports and his son, George, were assigned to accomplish the work, they being considered by Mr. Elliott Woods, superintendent of the Capitol, to me men possessing the requisite nerve.

The first step was to erect a scaffold around the statue, which required about a week to complete. The measurements for the scaffold were first taken and then each section was sawed out and shaped up from the spruce pine to fit the different positions in the temporary structure about the statue. Spruce pine was selected because it was light and easily handled. The uprights used on the frame work were two by three inches and the platforms were of boards one-half inch thick by twelve inches wide. These sections were then holsted up to their respective positions and bolted, and, as a further means of security, were lashed together with ropes.

It was intended to clean the statue with pumice-stone, but this process polished it up too highly, so it was decided to use nothing but water, in order to remove all particles of dirt, and then give it an antique bronze color.

As a protection from lightning, the statue, when erected, was provided with nine copper tubes, four and a half inches the dome of the National Capitol, is nov long, with platinum points one and one-half inches long. One of these tubes was placed on each shoulder of the figure and seven on the head. These tubes were provided as a means of escape for the electricity when lightning struck the statue, and not for the purpose of conducting the electricity through the base of the figure, as is generally supposed. Upon inspecting the statue, about a week ago, it was found that the electricity from lightning had burnt off some of the platinum points, and these were replaced with new ones.

The statue appears to be a great magnet for lightning, for the men now working on it are invariably obliged to leave their work when an electrical storm approaches, because the statue becomes fully charged with electricity, and to remain at their occupation in midair is dangerous. Another peculiar and interesting thing noticed while cleaning the statue was that the shield upon which the hand rests bears the colors of red, white and blue, and it was first thought that it had been painted in these colors, tout when the shield was rubbed with a wet cloth these colors came off readily, the particular colors proved to be a freak of nature, and the suggestion has been advanced that the different hues on the shield had formed from some peculiar action of the elements.

The statue was built up in sections, action of the elements.

I will venture to prophesy that the power of individual liberty will some day tear asunder the bends of this uncongenial and States. Do you doubt this? Take a seat in the gallery of the Senate or House of Representatives in Washington and look another without meeting with resistance?

"Read the history of the early days of the republic and ask where the Union

patriotism of Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Webster, Clay and Calhoun. It stands dishonored and disgraced in the hands of the septered puppet, who from under his this great people, surrounded by such characters as the peddler of ribbons and

It is quite a hard matter now for a man or set of men to obtain proper pay for services actually rendered and should be an impossibility for a charter containing any such provision as this contains to be obtained from any State Legislature.

Your correspondent tells us that this "is a rich organization"! Small wonder! From the numerous fights made by this association before the Legislature and in many courts, it is manifest that it will die hard, but, if the facts be as stated, it should surely die—so far as this compulsory levy is concerned. STEINWAY,

Church, has been untiring in his efforts to help the men and to bring about a settlement of the strike in Petersburg. He went to Richmond several times to confer with the officials in an effort to get an increase in wages for the men in Petersburg. Falling in this he at length succeeded in getting the company to agree to reinstate the men in Petersburg at the wages paid when they went out. He got out of his sick bed, being ill with fever, and went to the hall to communicate this result to the men. They declined to return as he advised, and said Dr. Starr was siding with the company. DR. STARR'S ATTITUDE. The Doctor returned to his bed and only for the past few days has been able to go out. He refrained from use of the cars, desiring in any way he could to help the boys. He says now that constant walking has overtaxed his strength and rendered him unfit for work, and that he will have to use the street cars again. That his hands are wounded so he cannot drive a horse and the cars furnish the only mode of conveyance ieft to him. "When the strike took place," he said, "I began to walk, to contribute thereby, if I might, to an early solution of the trouble. I did all I could to aid our noble boys, and now that the cause I sought to help has become utterly hoppeless, I do not see why I should make this sacrifice any longer, just because the Virginia Passenger and Power Company did not see the question of wages from my own standpoint as a citizen of Petersburg. "Rejecting the use of the cars can no longer help the interests of our brtheren and friends in this city, and it is now time for the gentleman from Michigan, who ordered the strike to call it off." MILITARY COMPANY. Many young men interested in the organization of a military company in Petersburg met at the Y. M. C. A. last night and decided to organize a company if the Common Council will erect an armory suitable for their needs. A committee was appointed to wait on the committee appointed by the Council In the matter. This committee is composed of Jam

PARIS. July 4.—The Senate and Chamber of Deputies adjourned to-day for the summer holidays. The closing hours were not marked by any excitement, the most important work of the session having been previously completed. The main features of Premier Combe's policy regarding the religious orders have been carried and the Ministry's majority has been maintained throughout the session although it has been somewhat reduced in several recent divisions. The ministry will thus continue in office at least until the reassembling of Parliament.

There is a clear out issue in Henrico county politics, which is very hot just now, over the question of which court clerk is retained under the new Constitution. Clerk Broaddus, of the Circuit Court, claims that when the County Court goes out of existence, the clerkship goes with it, and that he, as the clerk of the Circuit Court, is the legal officer under the Constitution. On the other hand, Mr. a strike nearly three weeks ago are still holding out firm, and no one of the number has yet returned to work. They continue to believe firmly in the success of the strike, and say that chances are still decidedly with them. Meanwhile the cars continue to be operated on all the lines day and night according to schedules that obtained before the strike was ordered. The number of passengers seems to increase each day, due mainly for the past few days to the exceedingly excessive heat.

Men and women who have walked Waddill maintains that it is distinctly county clerkship which is retained while the County Court is relegated to oblivion. The lines of the territory covered by the new Circuit Courts will not be con-

the new Circuit Courts will not be contiguous to any one county, but will in some cases cover several of them. But for each county there will be a clerk called the county clerk. Mr. Waddill bases his contention upon the language of the Constitution, which, in enumerating the officers to be elected in each county says, "and one county clerk, who shall be the clerk of the Circuit Court. Still there are many others who stand by Mr. Broaddus, and believe that he is in the right. An Ashland paper recently came out, saying, in part:

"According to the opinion of many good reasoners, County Clerk Broaddus, of Henrico county, is the legal clerk of the county, and is not affected by the new Constitution's ruling. But it seems that an effort will be made to oust him to make place for someone who wants his job." excessive heat.

Men and women who have walked since the strike began have had to ride. Many complaints are heard from business men and their clerks because they have to continue to walk. Many say they have determined to walk many say they have determined to walk many say they have to continue their walk men, the retail merchants and the politicians will doubtless continue their weary walking till the strike is over.

OUTSIDE OPINION.

With many the opinion prevails that the strike is over now since the cars are all running regularly.

The travel to Ferndale Park last night was the heaviest of any time since the strike began. The cars on that line carried an average of from forty to fifty passengers for an hour or two.

Dr. W. G. Starr, the distinguished and learned pastor of Washington-Street Church, has been untiring in his efforts to help the men and to bring about a settlement of the strike in Petersburg. He went to Richmond several times to confer with the officials in an effort to get an increase in wages for the men in
